About the book:

Archie's Daughter is a mainstream fiction novel about families and mental illness. It is the uncertain story of Sally, her marriage to Johnny, and her father, Archie, who hid the truth of her mother's death from her. Eventually she decides to find out what really happened to her mother, aided by Johnny and her two brothers. This is Sally's story, searching to understand her apparently absent mother, her father's lies, how to survive and pursue relationships when life seems engineered and pre-set to undermine and destroy. Archie's Daughter is a well-considered work of depth, to be enjoyed and empathised with its complexity and beauty.

About the author:

This is author Jane Seaford's first published novel but she has had a great deal of success with her short fiction. Examples of these can be read on her website www.JaneSeaford.com. Several of her stories have been broadcast on Radio NZ, others have appeared in anthologies and literary magazines, including Takahē, JAAM and Bravado. They have also done well in competitions, amongst other successes, two have been short listed in the prestigious Fish Publishing annual short story contest, and another was given an honourable mention in the 2010 BNZ competition celebrating Katherine Mansfield and open to New Zealand published writers.

Jane is also assistant fiction editor of Takahē, teaches creative writing from time to time and was until recently the president of The South Island Writers' Association.

Jane finds e-publishing exciting, as it is clearly how we will all read in the future, it makes buying books far cheaper, the audience is world wide and it's kind to trees. Really Blue Books is a new Australian publisher with a different and inspiring attitude to publishing. The company was set up to produce e-books rather than traditional print editions. It also aims to foster great writing and to bring this to a wide audience.
